Announcement of subscription to third-party allocation of new shares by Tohoku Magnet Institute

Tokyo, November 30, 2018 – Industrial Growth Platform, Inc. (IGPI) has underwritten a third-party allocation of new shares by Tohoku Magnet Institute, which is engaged in the development, manufacturing and sales of ultra low-loss soft magnetic materials.

Tohoku Magnet Institute is a Tohoku University-originated venture that was established with the aim of putting ultra low-loss soft magnetic materials, a product of research at Tohoku University, to practical use.

In fields including information, communications, home appliances, industrial devices, automobiles and energy, where energy conservation is called for, there is demand for improvement in the performance of materials used toward that end. To respond to such societal needs, Tohoku Magnet Institute aims to spread the use of innovative new materials and create new businesses in the Tohoku region of northeastern Japan.

IGPI will offer advice concerning overall management matters to enhance the Tohoku Magnet Institute's corporate value and continue to assist start-ups that are science and technology-based by utilizing IGPI's network resources.
